About this document

This fictional reference document describes example banking services, customer responsibilities, transaction limits, support channels, and basic service procedures. It is designed for testing document parsing, table extraction, embedded-image extraction, OCR, chunking, and retrieval in a retrieval-augmented generation (RAG) application.

Important: Nexora Bank and all names, codes, limits, phone numbers, dates, and transaction details in this document are invented for software testing. They do not describe a real financial institution or real customer account.

1. General Banking Guidelines

Nexora Bank customers should keep their contact details current, review account activity regularly, and use official bank channels for service requests. Customers should retain transaction references until a payment or transfer has been fully reconciled.

Account access and verification

For account-specific requests, the bank's illustrative digital service flow requires identity verification. A one-time password (OTP) may be sent to the registered contact method. Customers should enter OTPs only in the official application or website and should never disclose them to staff or callers.

Transfers and payment review

Before confirming a transfer, verify the beneficiary name, destination details, and amount. A transaction marked as pending may still be processing; avoid submitting a duplicate payment until the status is checked. Keep the transaction reference available when contacting support.

Illustrative service specifications

Service	Illustrative limit / rule	Typical availability
UPI transfer	Up to INR 100,000 per day	06:00–23:00 daily
NEFT transfer	Subject to account and channel limits	Available through supported channels
Statement download	Up to 12 months per request	24-hour self-service
Cheque book request	One request per eligible account at a time	Request tracking in app

The limits above are fictional examples. A production system should use verified, current bank policy rather than values extracted from this test document.

2. Fees and Processing Windows

The following table provides sample service charges and expected processing windows. Actual timing can depend on the receiving institution, payment network, cut-off time, holidays, and additional verification.

Service event	Example charge	Expected processing / note
Digital account statement	No charge	Generated immediately in supported formats
Printed statement at branch	INR 50 per request	Usually 1–2 business days
Cheque book delivery	No charge for first standard book	Illustrative estimate: 5–7 business days
Stop cheque request	INR 100 per cheque	Subject to request acceptance before presentment
Failed transfer investigation	No charge to raise a query	Reference number required for investigation

3. Digital Banking Safety

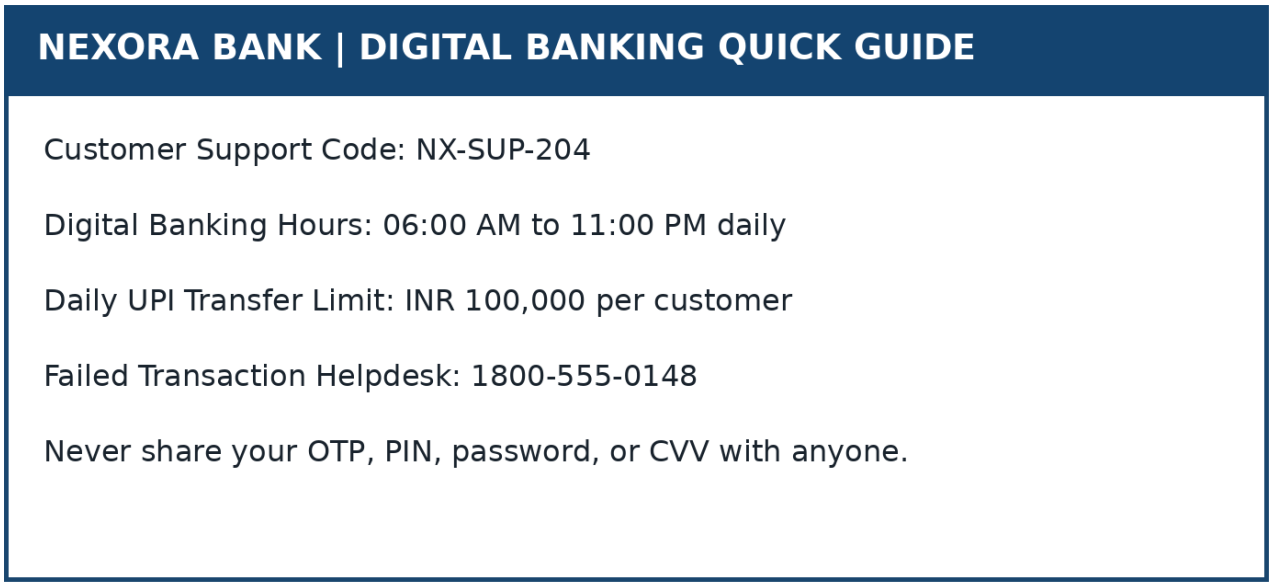

Use a unique password and enable any available additional security controls. Do not install remote-access software at the request of an unsolicited caller. Nexora Bank will not ask customers to disclose a complete password, PIN, CVV, or OTP in a phone call or email.

When a transaction looks unfamiliar, secure access to the account, record the transaction reference, and contact the bank through an independently verified support channel. Do not rely solely on phone numbers or links received in unexpected messages.

4. Embedded Image Test Materials

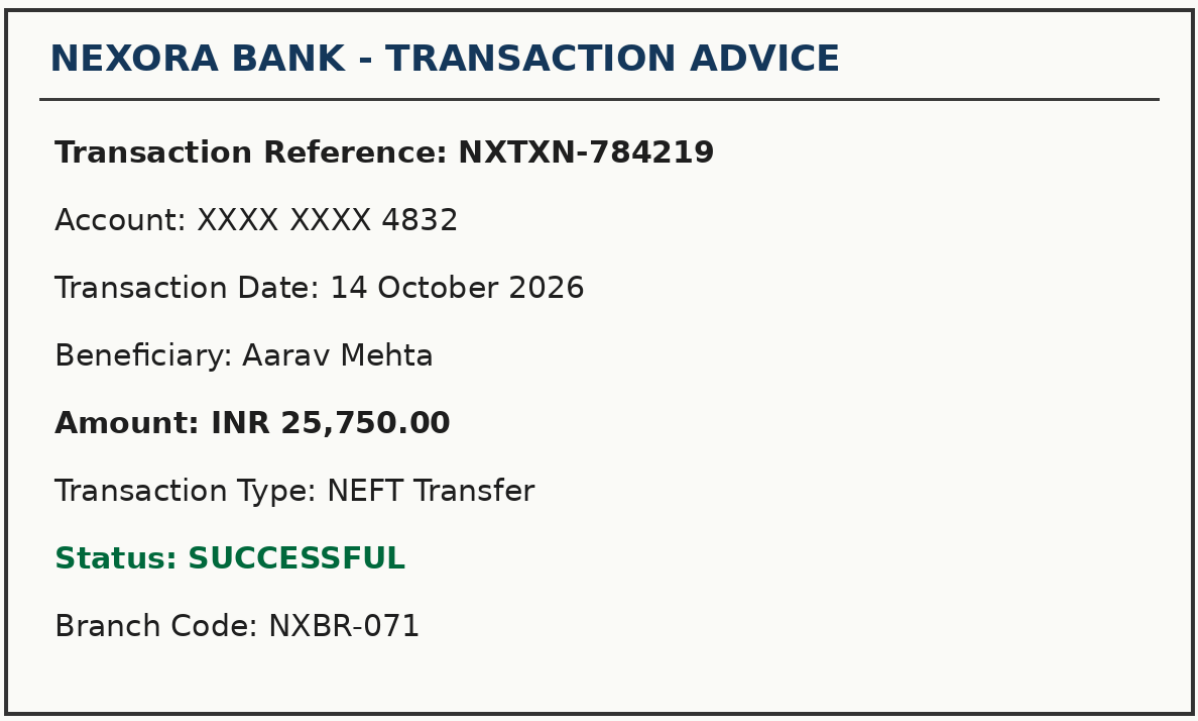

The next two graphics are deliberately embedded as raster images rather than PDF text. Use them to validate image discovery, image extraction, OCR accuracy, metadata association, and vector retrieval.

5. Customer Support and Escalation

For this fictional bank, customers should first use the in-app help area for routine questions. For a disputed or delayed transaction, include the transaction reference, date, amount, and a concise description of the issue. Never include a password, PIN, CVV, or OTP in a support message.
